JUSTICE AFTER GENOCIDE

Studies of the 20th c. have found that the last 100 years has seen more people die through genocide and state-sanctioned murder than on the century's many battlefields. Effectively responding to genocide, ethnic violence, and abuses of human rights is a primary challenge of our day.

The California History-Social Science Framework includes study of the Holocaust and other genocides in recent history. The goal is to learn why they happened and what can be done to help the victims and to promote justice. Genocide topics are all very difficult to teach... often because youth and others in our schools have experienced similar atrocities.

People make choices. Choices make history.

Cost per/person $25 – includes materials + a light supper

Open to educators & counselors from schools and community organizations
