*Ambassador Cameron Munter (ret.)
CEO & President EastWest Institute*

There is a new diplomatic tone in the age of Trump. America's relations with China, Russia, but also India and Europe are undergoing change. Ambassador Munter analyzes these new challenges of tone and substance, identifies additional cases and suggests how new approaches to diplomacy can address these challenges.

Ambassador Munter is one of America's most experienced diplomats in handling crisis. He served as U.S. Ambassador to Pakistan during a period of strained relations from 2010 to 2012 that included the operation by the Obama administration against Osama bin Laden. Earlier he served as Ambassador to Serbia from 2007 to 2010 where he negotiated the domestic consensus for European integration and managed the Kosovo independence crisis. He also served two terms in Iraq, leading the first Provincial Reconstruction Team in Mosul and then overseeing U.S. cooperation in planning the drawdown of U.S. troops in Baghdad. He also served in the Czech Republic and Poland, and as Director of the National Security Council in the White House.
